

This Week In Credit

U.K. And China Lead Data-Light Week

This report does not constitute a rating action.

The Top Line | Nov. 6, 2023

With three new risky credits last week, the global count so far this year is up to 89. This is 40% higher than at the same time last year. In the week ahead, the U.K. will release its preliminary GDP data for the third quarter and China will release its October credit data (Friday). Markets are also expecting lower October inflation prints in both Germany and China (Wednesday) while Japan's September wage data (Monday) will be important for its medium-term inflation outlook. Australia's monetary policy meeting is on Monday, with markets expecting a 25-basis-point rate hike.

Key Takeaways

- Rating activity last week was predominantly negative with three new risky credits and four defaults. What's more, negative outlooks or CreditWatch placements outnumbered positive ones by a factor of 3.6.
- Two of the three risky credits and three of the four defaults were U.S. issuers, from a variety of sectors.
- Most benchmark rates dipped or were broadly steady, while corporate spreads and CDS narrowed across the board.

Ratings performance trends

Data as of Nov. 2, 2023. Note: Weekly rating actions, weekly transitions, and industries most at risk are all global data. Data excludes structured and public finance. Upgrades and downgrades exclude no-debt corporate rating actions and confidential rating actions. Downgrades exclude transitions to default and confidential rating actions. Defaults from confidential issuers are included in the default tally. OLCW--Outlook/CreditWatch.
